Discovering the Archaeologists of Europe 2014 is a transnational project, examining archaeological employment and barriers to transnational mobility within archaeology across nineteen European countries. It is undertaken with the support of the Lifelong Learning Programme of the European Union and it will be built upon the results of a previous project, which ran from 2006-2008, updating its results and expanding its view. Disco 2014 Project will focus on the effects of international economic crisis over archaeological sector, attempting to outline the situation and suggesting new strategies
